

Subscribe your way

Most software companies lock you into one-size-fits all licensing terms. Not Autodesk. We provide a range of access options that you can mix and match to best meet your needs.

Ultimate flexibility

Daily access to more than 100 Autodesk products with Flex

More agility

Monthly access for contractors and fast-moving projects

Ongoing access

Annual access for your core team, new hires, or longer-term projects

Price certainty

Multi-year access with savings each year for greatest return on your investment

Every company has unique software needs. What kind of company are you?

ACROBAT

Flat reporting structure; agility to move faster than the competition

You're nimble, with a small core team of designers and engineers who are hands-on every day, plus an extensive network of expert contractors to take on the unusual or unexpected. At your size, price certainty is critical to manage cash flow and you're willing to commit to your tools long-term to lock in savings.

For example:

- 4 3-year subscriptions (paid annually)
- 5 Monthly subscriptions (as needed)

EXPLORER

Established products and workflows; endless curiosity

Who knows where your ideas will take you? Sure, you're on solid ground now, but the world is constantly changing—and there's no way you'll be left behind. You stay on top of the latest industry trends, constantly exploring new products and better ways to meet your customers' needs. All of which requires a balance of price certainty and flexibility.

For example:

- 6 Annual subscriptions
- 6 Daily-Flex access (experiment and validate new tools like the Fusion machining extension)

ROCKETEER

Frequent new team members; skyrocketing growth

Like a rocket, your growth keeps climbing higher. And higher. It seems like every other month, there's a new product, a new customer request, that brings new challenges to your team. And that team is expanding at a rapid clip, so the price of software is important—but making sure you have the tools you need to grow is more important.

For example:

- 3 Multi-year subscriptions (paid annually)
- 7 Annual subscriptions
- 2 Monthly subscriptions (as needed)
- 2 Daily-Flex access (for occasional approvals)

ARTISAN

Change is the only constant; frequent client collaboration

When top companies want the best manufacturing partner available, they turn to you. There's no challenge you won't accept, no timeline that's too aggressive. But the flexibility you provide comes at a cost: you never know what your needs will be from one month to the next. Fortunately, you don't need to.

For example:

- 3 Annual subscriptions
- 8 Monthly subscriptions
- 5 Daily-Flex access (the solutions you need, only when you need them)

MACHINE

Established products; steady growth; low risk tolerance

You've made it. Your reputation for innovation is well-earned. Your customers rely on you as a trusted partner. And your competition? They're in your rearview mirror. But that's no reason to rest. There are always new problems to solve, new ideas to explore. After all, isn't that what got you into engineering in the first place?

For example:

- 8 Multi-year subscriptions (paid annually)
- 2 Annual subscriptions
- 4 Monthly subscriptions (for data-only users)
- 4 Daily-Flex access (for occasional approvals)

Stuck in a one-size-fits-all trap?

PRISONER

Maybe agile, maybe innovative, maybe growing; definitely paying for way more than you need

You're a small, nimble company. Or an innovative one. Or perhaps you're the leader in your industry. At least, you want to be all these things. Unfortunately, you're trapped in a one-size-fits all mess that costs way too much and provides too little. Sure, your core team needs a long-term subscription. But temporary contractors? The occasional approver? There's got to be a better way. (Hint: there is.)

For example:

- 13 Multi-year, full-term access for all users—core, contractors, occasional approvers—who are locked into an inflexible, long-term subscription model
